What to think about...

- Where and with whom do you want to live?
- What can you do for yourself?
- What do you need help with?
- What questions do you have?
- What income and resources do you have available?
- What transportation is available for your doctor visits, shopping, and other trips?
- Are you a person with a disability who wants to work?

Do You Want to Go Back to Your Own Home?

California Community Transitions Can Help

Do you want to move back to your home or community but need help to do so?

CCT may be able to help!

You may qualify if you:

- Are receiving Medi-Cal,
- Live in a Medi-Cal paid inpatient facility for at least three months before you move back home,
- Want to return to community living.

This program is available to persons of any age who qualify. You do not have to wait three months to apply.

Talk to a Transition Coordinator

The California Community Transitions Coordinator will:

- Explain the services that are available such as home and vehicle adaptation, home set up, assistive devices, wheelchairs and other medical equipment, training on self care, nursing visits, and how to get a personal care attendant.
- Talk to you about where you want to live and receive services.
- Explore and coordinate services and supports that are available in your home community.
- Help you talk about the program with your physician, family and other people you trust.
- Plan and coordinate your return to community living.

This is a voluntary program.

CCT partners with home and community-based services providers to help eligible Medi-Cal beneficiaries living in health facilities return to community living.

Talking to a Transition Coordinator will help you find out if there is an affordable place to live and what services are available to you.

Transition Coordinators can also connect you with the Medi-Cal California Working Disabled Program so you can work and still receive Medi-Cal benefits.

The first step is to call and ask to speak to a Transition Coordinator with the California Community Transitions Program.

Then call:

The organization listed on the back of this brochure, or at: www.dhcs.ca.gov/services/ltc/Pages/CCT.aspx
